All mighty, and moste merciful Lorde, the onely lyfe and helth, of all theym that truste in thee, which workest saluaciō in thy elect, as well by sicknes as other wise, and therfore bringest them very lowe, and yet restorest to helth againe: looke downe wyth thy pytyfull Eyes vpon thy seruant Edward our Kyng, and vpon this Realme of England, professing thy worde & holy name, and as thou didest moste fauorably deliuer King Ezechias fro extream sicknes, and prolongedst his lyfe for the saluegarde of thy people the Israelites, & defendedst them and the Citie from the Tyranny of the Assyrians: so we moste entirclye appeale to thy great mercies, graciously to restore the helth and strength againe of thy seruant Edward our Soueraine Lorde, that as thou hast begonne wth him the rooting out of Errour, Idolatry & Supersticion, and the planting of trew Religion, trew worshippyng & veritie: so it may please thy merciful goodnes, lōge to preserue hym for the confyrmacyō & establishmēt of the same, and also for the saulgarde and defence of this Realme, from al outward & inward Enemies, for the glorye of thy holye name. Looke not herin (O Lorde) vpon our desertes, whyche for abusinge thy worde, and sinfulness, deserue great punishmentes, but vpon thy plentyful mercyes, whyche reioycest to heale the greatest myseries. Be no lesse fauorable (O Lorde) at this present, to Edward our kyng, restoringe thy trew religion: then in times past to Ezechias resourinyng thy Religiō. Be no lesse mercyfull to England thy Church now: then in those dayes to Iury thy Church then. But as thy heauēly grace hath ben more reueled in these dayes by the cōmyng of thy deare Sōne our Sauour and mayster Chryste, and preaching of the Gospel: so it may please thy fatherlye loue and goodnes, to bestow vpon vs more abundaunce of the same fauorable grace and mercy, according to thy wyl in this our hūble request. Do this O most merciful Father for thy owne names sake, and for the mercyes and death of thy Sonne our only medyator, and redeemer Jesus Chryste. Amen.
